TRUMP URGES FUTURE GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWN

1 President Donald Trump came to office promising that he would produce so much winning that Americans would be sick of it. As he struggles to produce wins, some signs of frustration are starting to appear. Democrats' gleeful declarations that they outsmarted Republicans in a battle over a spending bill that avoided a government shutdown drew the ire of the president. Democrats were happy that funding for Trump's Mexico border wall was not included. Trump tweeted on Tuesday that maybe a government shutdown would not be so bad and that Republicans should consider changing Senate rules to make it easier to pass spending and other bills without any Democratic support. REUTERS

REPUBLICANS SHORT OF HEALTH CARE VOTES

2 Republicans in the House of Representatives said they were closer to agreeing on a reworked bill to overhaul the nation's healthcare system but still lacked the votes to pass it, as President Trump pressed lawmakers for a vote. The White House has been pressuring House Republicans to push ahead with legislation to repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act, after a first effort failed in March in a major setback for the Trump administration. "I think it's time now" for a healthcare vote, Trump told lawmakers at the White House on Tuesday. But Republican leaders, including House Speaker Paul Ryan, are once again struggling to balance the concerns of moderates, who want to protect Americans with pre-existing medical conditions, with the reluctance of conservatives to make changes. REUTERS

TRUMP, PUTIN DISCUSS SYRIA CEASEFIRE IN CALL

3 President Donald Trump and Russian President Vladimir Putin on Tuesday moved to ease the tension from U.S. airstrikes in April against Russian ally Syria, expressing a desire for a Syrian ceasefire and safe zones for the civil war's refugees. The two leaders spoke by phone for the first time since U.S. relations with Russian were strained by the U.S. attack on a Syrian airfield. They two leaders set the foundation for what could be their first face-to-face meeting in July. Statements from both the White House and the Kremlin suggested the two leaders had a productive conversation that included North Korea and fighting Islamist militants throughout the Middle East. REUTERS

US LAWMAKERS EYE AIRLINE LEGISLATION

5 Angry U.S. lawmakers threatened United Airlines and other carriers with legislation to force improvements as they expressed disgust after a passenger was dragged off an overbooked flight last month. At a tense House of Representatives hearing where executives defended airline policies, one lawmaker threw up his hands in frustration over the problems flyers routinely face, including complicated booking systems, confusing fees, long waits and unexplained flight delays. "We all know it's a terrible experience," said Rep. Michael Capuano, a Democrat from Massachusetts. "Some charge fees for baggage, some charge fees for oxygen, who knows?" The hearing could serve as a test of how the Republican-led Congress would respond to rising consumer anger. REUTERS

The Eagles' third-round pick has an inspiring story. GETTY IMAGES

Eagles rookie cornerback Douglas' journey to the NFL is true life changer

No one appreciates the NFL dream more than Eagles' third-round pick Rasul Douglas.

EVAN MACY
evan.macy@metro.us

The NFL draft is sort of an abstraction to most football fans.

Aside from a glorified few — the Leonard Fournettes, Christian McCaffreys and Deshaun Watsons — most of the 253 players taken in each year's extravaganza are reduced to names, 40-yard-dash times and highlight reels.

The realization of a lifelong dream is reduced to a three-day, made-for-TV special and oftentimes the best storylines are lost as the offseason changes the conversation to the game of football and away from the players and their struggle and sacrifice.

When Eagles rookie cornerback Rasul Douglas reports to minicamp later this month, he'll be wearing midnight green pads, but he'll be carrying a much heavier weight than that of his uniform and equipment.

"When you have to walk to McDonald's in the snow and you order five things and you eat two of them at 12 o'clock and you save the other dollar-menu things for later on in the day," Douglas said not long after being selected 99th overall Friday night. "I think that was one of my craziest days."

Douglas grew up with almost no football ambition — which is good because he had almost no football opportunity. His grades were lackluster and his financial situation was grim. But a strong showing on his SATs and the grit that would later help him fight for 50-50 balls as a cornerback helped him lift himself up.

"Out of high school, I didn't even think about college and didn't think about going to college," the defensive back, who spent his childhood in East Orange New Jersey, said. "My high school coach told me, 'Go there, make a name for yourself. You can do it.' And in junior college I struggled: sleeping on the floor and not having any money to eat. I thought about leaving, but my faith grew stronger and I wound up staying."

after having a good year, I thought the NFL could be a place where I belong."

The third-round pick is expected to sign a bonus netting him over $700,000. He'll be a success overnight, the minute he inks his $3 million-plus contract. The Eagles front office has given the 21-year-old from West Virginia via Nassau Community College glowing reviews — and Eagles fans are optimistic he'll make an instant impact on the team's recently disastrous secondary.

> "My high school coach told me, 'Go there, make a name for yourself. You can do it.'
> Rasul Douglas

For Douglas, who at 6-foot-2, 209 pounds has the natural size for a cornerback that coaches clamor for, football wasn't a viable option for his future until fairly recently.

"I wanted to play football, but I just knew I couldn't live like that by playing it," he said. "Honestly, after I started getting scholarship [offers] in junior college, and then recently, this year,

"[He has] tremendous ball skills and length," Eagles VP of football operations Howie Roseman said. "He's someone who was really on our radar for a long time and had a really good process, including the Senior Bowl."

'Summer of Rage' anarchists arrested for allegedly trashing developing block

Police say dozens of individuals toting anticapitalist leaflets vandalized a Philly neighborhood Monday night.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

May Day was marked by peaceful protests in Center City and South Philly, but hours later, a group of 30 to 50 individuals claiming to be anarchists allegedly caused more than $100,000 worth of damage while vandalizing developing blocks near Northern Liberties, police said.

The group, made up of individuals wearing all black, is "believed to be associated with the anarchist protesters 'Summer of Rage,'" a police report stated.

They left signs reading "Gentrification is death, revolt is life," and they smashed the windshields of luxury cars and splashed paint on the buildings, NBC reported.

Two suspects were arrested by highway patrol officers who spotted them running away a few blocks from the crime scene.

One of them, Patricia Monahan, 28, of Rhawnhurst, had a backpack that contained "a mission statement on how to disrupt capitalism," according to police, as well as a black scarf, a mask and a device used for shattering windows.

Monahan and Geoffrey Suchocki, 45, of Doylestown, who had a black scarf around his neck, were both arrested and charged with causing and risking a catastrophe, criminal mischief, criminal conspiracy and related offenses, police said.

Police said the group descended around 9:15 p.m. on the 1500 block of North Second Street and the 1500 block of North Phillip Street, in an area just above Northern Liberties lately referred to as Old Kensington.

"Windows were shattered, and paint covered the side walls and sidewalks of several of the listed properties," the police report stated. "Security cameras were ripped off buildings; windshields were shattered on several vehicles within a three-block radius."

A property manager of the new buildings alerted police.

Earlier on Monday, a fire torched new apartments being constructed by developer Ori Feibush in Point Breeze, who has also been a target of numerous anti-gentrification protests.

The Arson Task Force was reportedly investigating the cause of that blaze.

As marijuana worms its way into the sphere of accepted adult activity, weed-related food products are increasingly becoming a subject of legitimate epicurean exploration.

Just ask chef Oscar Toro, executive chef and partner at Jue Lan Club in Manhattan. He doesn't smoke marijuana – but he recently put his chef's cap on to prepare a cannabis oil-infused four-course gourmet "dankquet" on 4/20 at members-only club NSFW.

"My mother, since I was a kid, has had migraines all her life, like every day," Toro explained. Taking medicinal herbs alleviated his mom's pain, and Toro thought, "Let me take a second approach to this, even though I don't smoke."

Fans of food prepared with cannabidiol, or CBD oil, said it gives them a different experience than normal marijuana edibles.

"When you eat a weed brownie, you don't really want a brownie, it's there to serve a purpose," said "dankquet" guest Jing, from Manhattan's Upper West Side. "But this – you get the enjoyment of knowing you're going to get high, but there is a whole other level of enjoyment where you get to eat this really great food."

'dankquet' experience doesn't cause the same high as regular THC products or marijuana. But it does cause a state of relaxation many users equate with feeling "high."

The "dankquet" scene at the clubhouse in Williamsburg was intimate on April 20 (my birthday and the stoner holiday), with guests lounging on pillows around a mirrored table, the NSFW signature red light and Moroccan-style drapes.

"When you eat a weed brownie, you don't really want a brownie ..."

Guests ate family-style, some opting for fingers while others, like me, were fed by other people from forks.

The CBD dose tapered off as each course was introduced; the effects of the first course crept up on those snacking on the dishes, so everyone was euphorically high just before dessert.

A weed-aficionado and marketer for "sin-fluencers," NSFW's "chief conspirator" Daniel Saynt said that the most important thing about NSFW is education. From how to participate in BDSM without a trip to the emergency room to enjoying cannabis, people "need an educated experience."

It was tough to only eat one piece of the dessert: a ricotta cheese cake with burnt orange, crystallized ginger and blueberries ... and yes, CBD.

Report: NSA collected Americans' phone records despite law change

The NSA has been gathering a vast quantity of telephone "metadata," records of callers' and recipients' phone numbers and the times and durations of the calls — but not their content — since the September 11, 2001, attacks.

The U.S. National Security Agency collected more than 151 million records of Americans' phone calls last year, even after Congress limited its ability to collect bulk phone records, according to an annual report issued on Tuesday by the top U.S. intelligence officer.

The report from the office of Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats was the first measure of the effects of the 2015 USA Freedom Act, which limited the NSA to collecting phone records and contacts of people U.S. and allied intelligence agencies suspect may have ties to terrorism.

It found that the NSA collected the 151 million records even though it had warrants from the secret Foreign Intelligence Surveillance court to spy on only 42 terrorism suspects in 2016, in addition to a handful identified the previous year.

The report came as Congress faced a decision on whether to reauthorize Section 702 of the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act (FISA), which permits the NSA to collect foreign intelligence information on non-U.S. persons outside the United States, and is scheduled to expire at the end of this year.

The National Security Agency headquarters at Fort Meade, Maryland. GETTY IMAGES

Privacy advocates have argued that Section 702 permits the NSA to spy on Internet and telephone communications of Americans without warrants from the secret Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Court, and that foreign intelligence could be used for domestic law enforcement purposes in a way that evades traditional legal requirements.

The report said that on one occasion in 2016, the FBI obtained information about an American in response to a search of Section 702 data intended to produce evidence of a crime not related to foreign intelligence.

The report did not address how frequently the FBI obtained information about Americans while investigating a foreign intelligence matter, however.

On Friday, the NSA said it had stopped a form of surveillance that allowed it to collect the digital communications of Americans who mentioned a foreign intelligence target in their messages without a warrant.

The new report also came amid allegations, recently repeated by U.S. President Donald Trump, that former President Barack Obama ordered warrantless surveillance of his communications and that former national security adviser Susan Rice asked the NSA to unmask the names of U.S. persons caught in the surveillance.

Both Republican and Democratic members of the congressional intelligence committees have said that so far they have found no evidence to support either allegation. REUTERS

Senate votes to confirm Jay Clayton as SEC chairman

The U.S. Senate voted on Tuesday to confirm attorney Jay Clayton to head the Securities and Exchange Commission, the agency tasked with policing and writing rules for Wall Street.

In a 61-37 vote, the Senate approved the nomination, with some moderate Democrats joining their Republican colleagues in supporting his confirmation.

Clayton could be officially sworn in as SEC chairman as soon as Thursday.

The White House still must complete some paperwork, including an action by President Trump to formally designate him as SEC chairman.

Clayton is a longtime partner at law firm Sullivan & Cromwell who specializes in advising clients on public and private mergers and acquisitions and capital-raising efforts.

Clayton worked on the initial public offering of Alibaba Group Holding Company, and has also represented Goldman Sachs, where his wife Gretchen works.

She is now expected to step down from her post, a move that will make it easier for her husband to mitigate potential conflicts of interest. REUTERS

US air-traffic revamp is overdue for boarding

U.S. air-traffic control badly needs first-class treatment. Donald Trump's administration wants to privatize the organization that coordinates flights and manages often antiquated systems. The Federal Aviation Administration, currently in charge, has faced obstacles in trying to upgrade its 1940s-era technology, a project estimated to cost about $35 billion. Canada pioneered a self-funding, stakeholder-governed model. A similar approach could work for the more complex American system if carriers, politicians and the like can dump their baggage.

In most ATC operations across the United States, flight patterns are still organized on paper strips and passed by hand from one controller to another. The old-school radar used to mark planes with dots on screens can be off by as much as three miles.

Air-traffic control tower at LAX
GETTY IMAGES

There were nearly 40 million flight movements in the United States in 2015, according to the FAA. Of the much smaller number of commercial flights, over 80 percent arrive on time, according to the U.S. Bureau of Transportation Statistics, but that's still a lot of delays. Though the FAA is gradually upgrading its technology, almost a quarter of the late arrivals are attributed to air-traffic control — and that doesn't include late-arriving aircraft, some of which may be delayed by ATC, as well. Those advocating for a new system — including airlines as well as the administration — say that the GPS capabilities of cell phones are more sophisticated than the technology that organizes U.S. air traffic.

An overhaul has been proposed multiple times since the 1990s, but policy and funding have been at the mercy of a dysfunctional Congress. The FAA was partly shut down in 2011 because of political budget squabbles, and in 2013 more than 15,000 employees, including 3,000 safety inspectors, were temporarily put on leave. Right now, Washington will probably rely once more on short-term budget extensions, and without a longer-term deal something similar could happen again. REUTERS

Hillary Clinton says Comey's letter, Russian hackers cost her the election

She also said she supported the recent missile strikes ordered by Trump in Syria but was unsure if they would make a difference.

Hillary Clinton said on Tuesday she was on the path to victory in the 2016 presidential election until late interference by Russian hackers and FBI Director James Comey scared off some potential supporters.

In her most extensive public comments on the Nov. 8 election, Clinton told a New York conference she was derailed by Comey's Oct. 28 letter informing Congress the Federal Bureau of Investigation had reopened a probe of her use of a private email server and by the WikiLeaks release of campaign chairman John Podesta's emails, allegedly stolen by Russian hackers.

"If the election had been on October 27, I would be your president," she told a women's conference moderated by CNN's Christiane Amanpour.

"It wasn't a perfect campaign, but I was on the way to winning until a combination of Comey's letter and Russian WikiLeaks," the Democrat said of the loss to Republican Donald Trump. "The reason why I believe we lost were the intervening events in the last 10 days."

Clinton, who said she is going through the "painful process" of writing a book dealing in part with the election, also said misogyny played a role in her defeat. Becoming the first woman U.S. president would have been "a really big deal," she said.

Clinton took personal responsibility for the campaign's mistakes, but did not question her strategy or her staff. "I was the candidate, I was the person who was on the ballot. I am very aware of the challenges, the problems, the shortfalls that we had," Clinton said.

"It wasn't a perfect campaign, but I was on the way to winning until a combination of Comey's letter and Russian WikiLeaks. ... The reason why I believe we lost were the intervening events in the last 10 days."

She said she had no doubt that Russian President Vladimir Putin tried to influence the election for Trump, and bluntly criticized the new U.S. president for some of his foreign policy views and for tweeting too much.

"I'm back to being an activist citizen — and part of the resistance," she said.

Clinton said broader negotiations involving China and other countries in the region were critical for convincing North Korea to rein in its nuclear program. She questioned Trump's recent suggestion he would be willing to meet with North Korean leader Kim Jong Un under the right circumstances.

"You should not offer that in the absence of a broader strategic framework to try to get China, Japan, Russia, South Korea, to put the kind of pressure on the regime that will finally bring them to the negotiating table," Clinton said. REUTERS

World's 'oldest person' dies in Indonesia at 146

An Indonesian man reported to be the world's oldest person died at the age of 146 this week, family members said on Tuesday.

Sodimejo, who was known locally as Mbah Gotho, was born in December 1870, according to a government-issued ID card that media reports said had been verified by local officials in the Central Java town of Sragen.

Indonesian media reported that Sodimejo was the world's oldest person, citing his identity papers. Reuters could not independently verify Sodimejo's age.

Sodimejo's grandson said he had been taken to hospital last week because of his deteriorating health.

"The problem was he didn't want to eat or drink," said grandson Suryanto, who, like his grandfather, goes by one name.

He then insisted on being brought home, and died several days later, Suryanto said. Sodimejo was buried on Monday morning in a local cemetery.

According to Guinness World Records, Jeanne Calment, a French woman, had the longest confirmed human lifespan. She died in 1997 at the age of 122.

Ben Affleck moved when you weren't looking

Ben Affleck was reported to have moved out of his shared home with Jennifer Garner in mid-April. But I guess he just now got around to getting his stuff out of the house. Stars: They procrastinate just like us!

According to Page Six, some dudes came to Jennifer Garner's house to haul his belongings to a new address. For real this time. Ben Affleck, who is a big boy with a big-boy job, was on site supervising the move. So mature!

Affleck, 44, and Garner, 45, have been separated for two years, but they both stayed in the family home with their three kids Violet, 11, Seraphina, 8, and Samuel, 5. The very reluctant "Batman v Superman" star had been living in the family guesthouse which, LOL.

The gentle giant with the Boston brogue and the woman from the Capital One commercials were married in 2005 and were together for a total of 12 very long years. At least she had the good fortune to get with him after that "Gigli" abomination. I mean, barely, but still.

Janet Jackson is ready for her comeback

Janet Jackson — a woman in the midst of a divorce she would very much like to distract you from — is going back on tour.

According to Vulture, the "Dammn Baby" singer announced Monday that her tour — renamed State of the World — will kick off in September. The 50-year-old had originally rescheduled the tour to accommodate the birth of her son Eissa, who, as we have established, is very cute.

The pop icon gives us a little bit of extra, which is much appreciated.

"I just want to keep it real with you guys," she says, cheekbones a-glistening. "Yes, I separated from my husband. We are in court and the rest is in God's hands." OK, not as juicy as I needed, but that will do.

News broke in April that Jackson and her husband, Wissam Al Mana, had split after five years of marriage. Al Mana reportedly made her stop doing all that bumping and grinding, which is kind of her thing.

Here's hoping the State of the World tour is a return to form. I expect Jackson to flaunt her body in revealing clothing and give the floor a few dry humps. You know, just going back to normal.

Aw: J.Lo & A-Rod make their red-carpet debut

Jennifer Lopez, 47, and Alex Rodriguez, 41, historically have only really nice, really vague things to say about each other. They proved their love is unquestionably the real thing by lovingly gazing at each other on the red carpet at Monday's Met Gala.

A-Rod even shared a photo of him taking a photo of J.Lo on his Instagram, writing "Admiring Jennifer doing her thing on the carpet at the #MetGala2017." Boring! She did look very nice, I should add, albeit completely off-theme, in a baby-blue Valentino gown.

Also, I should note that while J.Lo was jamming to "Bad and Bougee," Rodriguez was just seated, trying to remember how he got there. What a sweet pair!

Johnny Depp is possibly brilliant, also lazy

Johnny Depp — a gorgeous, tortured unicorn of a man who fell into a toxic-waste dump 10 or so years ago — is embroiled in a lawsuit right now with his former managers at The Management Group. They say he's irresponsible with his money. He says spending $5 million on a cannon with which to shoot Hunter S. Thompson's ashes isn't irresponsible. People are pointing fingers!

According to The Hollywood Reporter, TMG is firing back with escalated claims against the 53-year-old in an amended complaint. Depp had complained that if he was really so irresponsible with his money, TMG should have dropped him. "It's my money," he told The Wall Street Journal. "If I want to buy 15,000 cotton balls a day, it's my thing."

In response, TMG is calling Depp's sense of entitlement "clear and epic," which, duh. "Depp listened to no one, including TMG and his other advisers, and he demanded they fund a lifestyle that was extravagant and extreme," writes attorney Michael Clump in the amended complaint.

The most insane of those expenses? The claim that Depp spends hundreds of thousands of dollars a year on a sound engineer who feeds him lines on set. Depp apparently kept a dude on a yearly retainer, because honestly, as an actor, why should he have to memorize lines, anyway?

Taylor Schilling loved gaining weight

The actress talks her new movie, "Take Me," and eating terribly for her next film.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Taylor Schilling, right, hires a man (Pat Healy) to kidnap her in "Take Me," hitting VOD on Friday. THE ORCHARD

Taylor Schilling doesn't have a lot of time off. She spends a good part of her year shooting "Orange is the New Black," which is about to start its fifth season. But sometimes she squeezes in a film between long shoots. One was "The Overnight." Her latest is "Take Me," a small, very funny indie. Pat Healy (who also directed) plays an entrepreneur with a bizarre business: He loans himself out to people who want to be kidnapped, who see it as some form of therapy. Schilling plays his latest client/victim. But as the job goes awry, it becomes clear that she's not being entirely honest with him.

We talked to the actress, 32, as she was nursing a salad. So we wound up talking food.

How's your salad?
It's good. I dunno, I'm simple. I've got very plebeian tastes. I don't care. I'm not a foodie.

No?
No. I really wish I was more of a food connoisseur. I eat eggs, and chicken, and cereal. I eat like a 2-year-old a lot of the time.

Maybe you'll become a foodie later in life and get really into truffle fries.
Truffle fries are good. But also regular fries are good, too. [Laughs] I'm just as happy eating both. I guess I don't have a very sophisticated palate. I just like it. I think that fries are across the board pretty delicious. Crispier fries are better, though.

So crispy fries are the only thing you're a food snob about.
[Laughs] Actually, yes. That's actually true. I won't have soggy fries.

It's incredible how bad America's snack food are.
I just did this movie — not this one, but it's really good. [Ed.: It's called "Family."] I was playing someone who was a bit of binge-eater. So I had to gain some weight — which I was really excited about. It was rad.

GETTY

It was rad?
Yeah. I ate like the rest of America, so it was amazing.

What did you eat?
Pizza and sandwiches, fries. I'd have dessert all the time, like cake. It was hard to switch back. It took me almost two weeks to not crave sugar. Because I couldn't stop. It's truly a drug.

"Take Me," like "The Overnight," is a small film that's fun but goes to dark places, and a film you were able to make while on break from "Orange." Do you get a lot of chances to do this kind of stuff in between seasons?
No. It's hard. I crave it a lot, and I miss it. I always feel this sense of guilt that I'm not doing more theater. It's like "Sophie's Choice" every time my break comes, because I don't know what to do with my time off. There's so much more I want to do that's outside of prison.

Your character here is kind of the opposite of Piper. She's a lot more confident and driven.
She's a renegade, this woman. She has this sense of, "I'm going to get what I want. I'm in charge of you, and I'm better than you, and I'm smarter than you." I thought of her as an addict. She's a very lonely person who needs to get this particular high to be able to go on with the rest of her life. She needs to feel dominated, then she needs to dominate. It's sad. She's a sad woman. But I'm attracted to that. I'm attracted to people who can't accept themselves — who are struggling, who are really feeling like they're on the fringes.

Hitting the high notes with Lea Michele

The former "Glee" star dishes on her new album, love of cheese and more.

MEGAN JOHNSON
@MetroNewYork
letters@metro.us

Whether she's on the stage, screen or anywhere in between, Lea Michele knows how to shine brightly. Following the release of her second album, "Places," earlier this spring, we caught up with the actress and singer to chat about her new record.

How have you changed as a person since your first album "Louder" came out?

So much has happened since "Louder" came out. I finished "Glee," I worked on "Scream Queens," I lived in New Orleans for a year. These past couple of years since "Louder" have been really incredible. I truly feel I've grown as a performer and as a person. I'm in such a settled and happy place in my life right now and I'm so happy to be able to do what I love and get to be back on the stage.

You've got the music and TV markets cornered. Is there one you prefer over the other?

I'm really grateful that I get to do both. I love television, but singing is one of the most incredible feelings in the entire world and I wouldn't give that up for anything.

Your birthday is in August, which means you will have completed your first year of your 30s soon. How have you improved in your 30s?

I think I've definitely grown a lot in these last couple of years. I'm always trying to constantly grow and learn and improve. But it feels amazing being 30.

What shows do you binge-watch lately?

I binge-watch everything! I love relaxing at home and watching Netflix. Recently I just got into "Peaky Blinders" and I love it so much. It's my absolute new favorite show.

Can you tell us anything about the ABC sitcom you're set to star in?

I just filmed a great new ABC pilot. It's such an interesting show about a young aspiring rapper who runs for town mayor and wins. It has original hip-hop and rap in each episode, which is so exciting. It's funny and heartwarming and I really hope that people get to see it.

You recently said you've never eaten fast food and don't eat candy. What is your favorite guilty-pleasure food?

Cheese, cheese, cheese and more cheese. Pizza, bagel and cream cheese, mac and cheese all day.

Philadelphia's Magic Gardens debuts 'Interweave'

Dive into more of Isaiah Zagar's colorful work.

MEREDITH ORLANDINI
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

Award-winning artist Isaiah Zagar is known in Philly for his incredible mosaic murals and his experiential masterpiece Philadelphia Magic Gardens (PMG). On Friday, May 5 PMG is opening an exhibition that highlights some of his work in a different medium. "Interweave: Fabric Works by Folk Artists & Isaiah Zagar" will showcase a collection of textiles from countries all over the world, from woven alpaca blankets of Peru to stamp-printed patterned fabrics of India.

The opening reception is from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on May 5. Guests will be served light fare and a complimentary glass of wine.

"Interweave" opens Friday. ALL PHOTOS ROVIDED

"Ahead of my Time"

Since moving to the city in the late 1960s and helping to spark the city's artistic rebirth, known as the "South Street Renaissance," Zagar and his wife, Julia, have been infusing the streets with intricate walls of tile and found objects. The exhibit aims to further connect the colors, cultures and traditions of countries around the world and portray the visual dialogue that occurs between Zagar and the folk artists with whom he works. The colorful blankets, rugs, and carpets will be shown alongside some of Zagar's own paintings and souvenirs from his travels.

"'Interweave' focuses on collaboration and community — two very important values for PMG," says Allison Boyle, events and marketing manager. "Most of our visitors don't know that Isaiah and Julia Zagar have been collaborating with folk artists from other countries for over 50 years and that there are thousands of handmade, one-of-a-kind folk-art pieces embedded in the site."

She adds, "The majority of the folk art at PMG is from Mexico, but there are many countries and cultures represented here. That multicultural, celebratory spirit is incredibly important to us and it adds to the welcoming, inclusive nature of the organization."

If you haven't been, this would be a great chance to experience the twisting, tile-covered walkways and hidden treasures of PMG. Can't make opening night? No worries — "Interweave" runs through July 9.

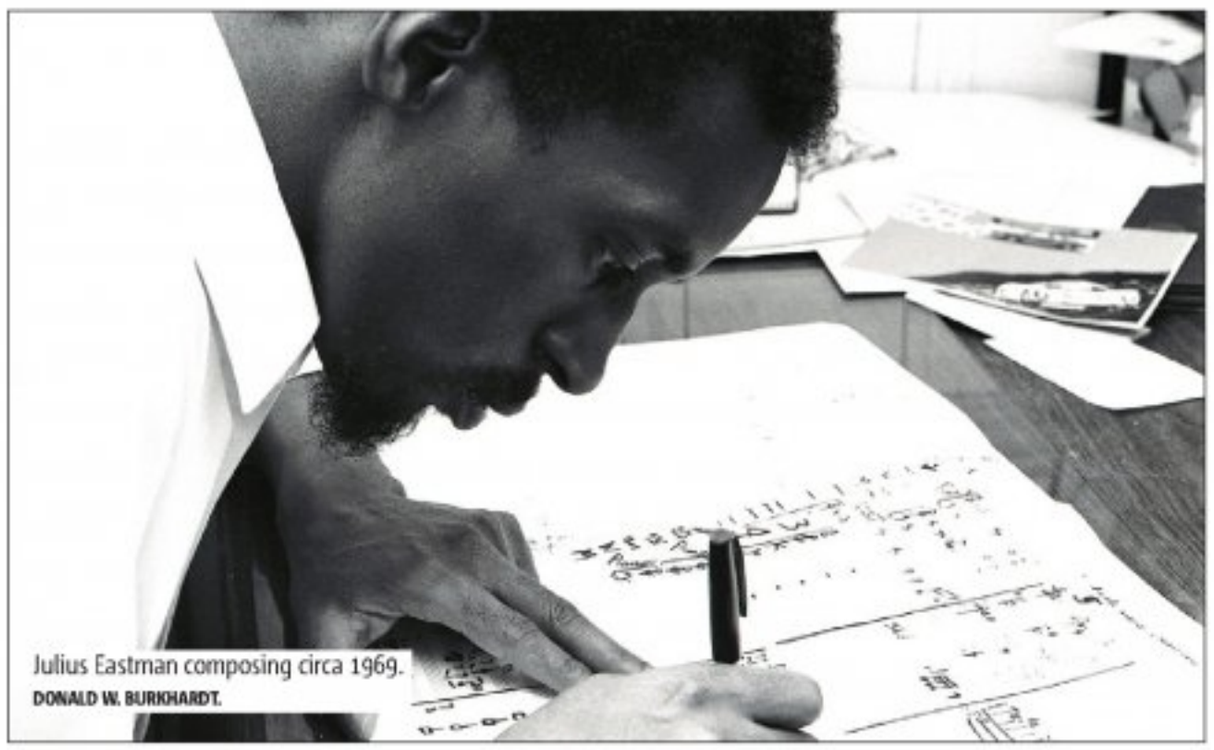
Looking back at gay African-American composer Julius Eastman



Julius Eastman composing circa 1969. DONALD W. BURKHARDT.

Julius Eastman in the parking lot of Baird Hall, Buffalo, New York, circa 1970. UNKNOWN

"Julius Eastman: That Which is Fundamental" explores the late provocateur's long-unheard music.

SHAUN BRADY
letters@metro.us

By the time of his death at age 49 in 1990, composer Julius Eastman was all but forgotten. A decade of erratic behavior fueled by drug abuse left him homeless, his career in shambles. Much of his music had been lost or scattered. It took eight months before the Village Voice took notice of his passing and printed an obituary.

More than 25 years later, Eastman's music is enjoying a resurgent popularity: the composer has been the subject of a recent anthology of essays, "Gay Guerrilla"; a three-CD set, "Unjust Malaise," among other recordings; and appreciations in the New Yorker, The New York Times, The Guardian and other publications. Throughout this month, Bowerbird will present the first large-scale retrospective of Eastman's music with four concerts at the Rotunda and an exhibition exploring his legacy at Slought Foundation. The project includes modern premieres of several compositions previously considered lost and rediscovered only after intensive, archaeological detective work.

"I hope that people will come away with a much wider understanding of Eastman as a composer, incorporating a much wider range of his musical styles," says Bowerbird director Dustin Hurt. "I'd also like it to move past this tragic narrative that's oft repeated but isn't necessarily true."

While Eastman's death and final years were no doubt tragic, Hurt points out that the composer enjoyed a great deal of acclaim and attention during his lifetime. He was a renowned vocalist who toured with Meredith Monk. He performed with Zubin Mehta, Pierre Boulez and John Cage, gave recitals at Carnegie Hall and Lincoln Center, and was nominated for a Grammy. "He was pretty famous," Hurt says, "or as famous as you can be in new music."

He adds, "Ironically, perhaps sadly, this striving to be a 'complete artist' may have actually been the thing that led to his downfall: the refusal to participate in the normal routines of life."

In 1844, the neighborhood that William Penn once called home, Mount Airy, was growing — and the then-German Township eventually split into two distinctly different portions: An urban zone, which became Germantown Borough, and a residential area, now called Mount Airy and Chestnut Hill.

From then on, colonial revivals and ivy-Victorian mansions sprang up in the pastoral Philadelphia neighborhood, including this lovingly restored piece of history, built in 1925. Situated at 621 W. Cliveden St., this single-family, seven-bedroom home is a little bit new, a little bit old, with a whole lot of personality. It's currently listed for $659,000

The spacious front porch along the home's brick exterior has already won us over — say goodbye to your cramped row house stoop! Enter through the oversized front door flanked with windows into a spacious, sunny formal entrance, showcasing dramatic, elevated ceilings and replete with historic charm.

Entertain guests by the stone fireplace in the formal living room, or move through a set of French doors into the cozy family room. There, Wissahickon schist stone walls offset wooden floors and bead board paneled ceilings, and large windows overlook the bosky property.

Through a set of butler's doors, approach the eat-in kitchen. A chef's dream, the kitchen is complete with custom glass-paneled cabinets, granite counters, stainless steel appliances and sinks and a six-burner gas range.

Find the master suite on the second floor, which features a set of French doors leading to a relaxing sitting room and a luxurious master bath. Three more bedrooms and a full bathroom round out the second floor; on the third, three more bedrooms, any of which could be converted into a game room, office or library.

The master suite is on the second floor. ALL PHOTOS SPACE & COMPANY / TREND MLS

8 Eco-friendly household appliances

Every time we connect an appliance, we consume electricity and make an impact on the environment. These responsible products pollute less and save you money on utility bills.

DANIEL CASILLAS / MWN

Cold bubbles

Samsung incorporates two eco-friendly technologies: ecobubble, a bubble-generation system in which detergent penetrates the fabric's fibers without the use of hot water, and the digital inverter motor, which saves 40 percent of energy compared with a traditional motor. samsung.com

2.

Better ink, less pollution

HP Latex printers feature ink composed of synthetic polymer particles and pigment particles. They are eco-friendly because they do not produce the harmful emissions that damage the ozone layer. In addition, they do not contain volatile organic compounds. hp.com

Nonleaking screens

If you plan to buy a computer monitor, get one with LG's in-plane switching technology. These have an LCD panel composed of liquid crystals that prevent leakage and loss of light, which degrades image quality and the definition of colors. In addition, it saves a lot of energy. lg.com

Responsible air conditioning

Samsung's air-conditioning systems now have energy-saving digital inverter technology, which maintains the desired temperature for long periods without having to be switched on and off frequently, so it consumes less electricity. samsung.com

Smart headsets

The Xperia Ear is a smart headset for hands-free communication. With the digital assistant, you can read your emails and make and receive calls, among other functions. And the best thing is that it is made from Sorplas, a recycled plastic from Sony. sonymobile.com

Microwaves that save

Daewoo microwaves feature Zer-On technology (zero-energy consumption). In standby mode, if the oven is not used for 10 minutes, it will automatically enter saving mode. And despite being connected to the power outlet, will not consume electricity. Daewooelecusa.com 7.

Clean refrigeration

Samsung refrigerators consume less energy thanks to the digital inverter compressor, a system that varies its revolutions according to the demand of temperature. In addition, refrigeration works with R600a, an ecological gas that minimizes environmental damage. samsung.com

8.

Green projector

Epson projectors have features that help to reduce energy consumption. Eco mode, for example, decreases fan brightness and noise, thereby saving energy and extending the life of the lamp. epson.com

10 NFL teams Eagles fans should hate the most

Why did Eagles fans boo so many other teams' players and fans during the NFL draft?

EVAN MACY
@evan_macy
evan.macy@metro.us

Eagles fans shined on the world stage last weekend as they showed up in tens of thousands for the NFL draft. GETTY IMAGES

The NFL draft in Philly was an overwhelming success by almost any measure — economics, football awareness or even peace and civility.

There were no battery-throwing incidents, no high-profile fan arrests or violence and nothing headline-worthy to take away from a memorable weekend celebrating football.

But one takeaway from anyone on Ben Franklin Parkway or watching at home on TV is that Eagles fans know how to boo.

They booed Roger Goodell, the booed any and all Cowboys picks, they booed Giants' fans and Redskins fans. Patriots fans got some hate. Vikings fans took some heat for their team's decision to trade for Sam Bradford. 49ers fans were forced to eat some crow for their dalliance with former Eagles head coach Chip Kelly. No one in the NFL was immune.

The Philadelphia sports fan is a unique mix of optimistic and fatalistic. They've had enough success — the 2000-2008 Andy Reid Eagles, the 2008-2011 Phillies, the 2001 76ers, the 2010 Flyers — to have tasted some success but have been stuck in the mud just as much. They are in the sweet spot for hatred. If a city's teams are too good — like Boston — there's really no point in hating lesser teams that rarely measure up. If your teams are atrocious all the time — like Buffalo, Cincinnati or San Diego — there isn't much motivation to bring the hate.

So without much football to watch or write about for a few months, here's a look at the 10 teams Eagles fans should hate the most:

1. Cowboys

Perhaps the biggest no-brainer in the NFL, Eagles and Cowboys fans do not get along. The hatred is deep and it is mutual. Philly is just 50-62 in 112 regular season meetings and 1-3 in the playoffs, giving Dallas the upper hand. It will be exciting to watch the rivalry grow into a new generation as Carson Wentz and Dak Prescott get set to duel again for their second seasons respectively.

2. Giants

The Eagles have faced no NFL team as often as they've faced the Giants and in 164 regular season meetings the teams are separated by less than 80 points (3,131 to 3,209 in favor of New York). The squads have split four playoff games and have played two Miracles in the Meadowlands. A strong hatred for Eli Manning has also fueled the fire in recent years.

3. Redskins

The fact that Washington's football team has a controversial name doesn't help their cause in the eyes of hating Eagles fans, who abhor their NFC East rivals to the south. The departure of DeSean Jackson — who signed with the Buccaneers this offseason — will lessen the rivalry a tad in 2017.

4. Patriots

Super Bowl XXXIX was the Eagles' only trip to the title game since 1980 and a 24-21 loss to Tom Brady and the Patriots left a sore spot in the hearts of Birds' fans. Revelations later of a Spygate scandal that resulted in fines has only increased animosity.

5. Steelers

Cross-state rivals the Penguins and Flyers have a little more heat to their beef, but fans of the Steelers and their six Super Bowls (in contrast to Philly's zero) always torture lifelong Eagles fans.

6. Buccaneers

A bitter setback to Jon Gruden's Bucs in 2003 derailed perhaps Philly's best team ever.

7. Seahawks

The Eagles have lost three in a row and five of their last six to Seattle and will face them again in 2017. Before drafting Carson Wentz, Eagles fans were envious of the Seahawks' move to take Russell Wilson before Philly had its shot.

8. Raiders

A very old wound, Philly lost in Super Bowl XV as Ron Jaworski failed to lift the Eagles passed John Madden's Raiders.

9. Saints

Though they are currently in a rebuild stage, it's a safe bet Eagles fans are still sour about the Birds' most recent playoff loss, a first round defeat at the hands of New Orleans.

10. Packers

Philly has only ever beaten Aaron Rodgers once (in 2013) and is 1-5 in their last six games against the storied franchise.

Flyers rebuilding plan gets accelerated with NHL draft lottery luck

The Flyers got some unexpected good news when they won the second overall pick in June's NHL draft.

ERIC GOLDSTEIN
@EricEsponda
sports@metro.us

This season was not a total loss for the Flyers. Although they remained home during the playoffs for the third time the last five years, they are assured to end up winners in the draft.

Originally slated to pick at No. 13, the Flyers bucked the odds and came out with the second pick in the draft lottery held in Toronto on Saturday. They had less than a 3 percent chance of moving up to the No. 2 slot.

So now, instead of taking a second-tier player and waiting a few years for him to mature, they will likely leave next month's draft in Chicago with an elite forward who is projected to make an instant impact on their roster, possibly as early as this fall, and accelerate their rebuilding process.

"Obviously we're excited," Flyers General Manager Ron Hextall told reporters on a conference call this weekend. "It's a big day for our franchise."

The players atop every team's board are centers Nolan Patrick and Nico Hischier.

Patrick, who is listed at 6-foot-2, 200 pounds and was a teammate of Ivan Provorov's in juniors, scored 20 goals and finished with 46 points in 33 games. His season was cut short due to sports hernia-related injuries. The year before, though, he had 41 goals and 102 points in 72 games.

At 6-foot, 175 pounds, Hischier tallied 38 goals and 86 points in 57 games en route to winning the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League rookie of the year this past season.

In its latest rankings, NHL Central Scouting has Patrick slightly ahead of Hischier.

"I'm not going to talk about who we're going to pick," Hextall said. "We know we're going to get a good player."

However, Hextall will just have to wait to see which 18-year-old the Devils, who won the draft lottery, decide to take with the first pick.

The Flyers will likely draft whoever is left at No. 2 between Nolan Patrick and Nico Hischier. GETTY IMAGES

Regardless, both players project to develop into exactly what the Flyers need — a top six forward who can put the puck in the net.

The only other time the Flyers had the second overall pick was in 2007, when they grabbed forward James van Riemsdyk. After a handful of subpar seasons, the Flyers traded him to the Maple Leafs for underperforming defenseman Luke Schenn. Schenn was dealt in January 2016 to the Kings, along with Vinny Lecavalier, in what was basically a salary dump.

Whether it's with Patrick or Hischier, the Flyers are no doubt looking for a bigger return this time around.

"Sometimes you get some good luck and sometimes you get some bad luck," Hextall said. "I feel like we had a lot of bad luck this year, and I'm hoping this is a turning point for us."

Aries You'll learn a lot if you observe and do your research. Sign up for a course that will increase your earning power. Travel and educational pursuits are favored.

Taurus You can avoid an emotional encounter if you stick close to the people you know and trust. If someone challenges you, take a pass until you feel fully prepared to win.

Gemini An opportunity will unfold if you attend a networking function. Don't be shy; express your thoughts and present your ideas. A partnership looks promising.

Cancer No one is perfect, including you. An empathetic gesture will encourage a solution that benefits everyone. Be a team player and enjoy the friendships that develop.

Leo Positive change is heading your way, so don't stifle it by thinking that you don't have to participate in order to take advantage of an opportunity.

Virgo Consider home improvements carefully. Don't take on responsibilities that will weigh you down. Do your research and try to do some work on your own.

Libra Express your feelings and share your ideas and concerns with someone who is as empathetic as you. Together, you can make a difference if you form a strong alliance.

Scorpio An opportunity to advance is within reach. Don't hesitate to express interest and share your qualifications and insight into a project. Your knowledge will be appreciated.

Sagittarius You'll gain experience if you sign up for a course or put more effort into networking and honing your skills. Someone will take notice if you share your ideas.

Capricorn Someone will disagree with you regarding domestic issues or your chosen lifestyle. Look at alternatives, but don't make a change for the wrong reason.

Aquarius Avoid getting into an emotional dispute with someone who tends to be stubborn. Go about your business and put your time and effort into self-improvement.

Pisces Look for alternative ways to use your skills, knowledge and experience. Being able to diversify will help you take advantage of a broader range of opportunities. EUGENIA LAST
